Bahamas Liquor Smuggling Plan Exposed by Manchester Guardian

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

NDER the caption, "Dirty Work in the Bahamas," the Manchester Guardian today pfints an editorial giving particulars of the prospectus of the "Bahamas International Trading Company," whose chief business, according to the Guardian, is "to sell liquor to American smugglers." The paper continues: "Unwary English investors are obviously being invited to finance an attempt by some extremely undesirable colonial subjects of King George to turn a dirty penny by helping disloyal citizens of a friendly state to break ws. The merited disaster which recently over gamble organized by a British adventurer"—by which the Guardian to prevent even the most foolish and least scrupulous of speculators here from taking shares. For any British subject to invite people t do so ought to be a criminal offense of the same order as complicity in filibustering against a friendly state. It will doubtless punishable by imprisonment within a few years unless these pests die out without this assistance."

The Guardian also says that the prospectus of the company in question discloses the fact that three of the six directors are members of the Bahamas Legislative Assembly, and that "a small, complaisant Legislature, partly composed of the directors of the company, procured it a monopoly of the liquor trade by the trick of first freezing competitors out of the trade by high taxation, and then cutting down the tax when the trick had done its work, and also by simply refusing a license to any new competitor. The Guardian asks: "What does the Colonial Office say to all this? Did the Governor sign without a word the legislation passed by the directors and their curious fellow legislators? And has the British Empire any power to discipline or cleanse such a body as this Legislature? Or is it all a falsehood worked up to help in touting for new money? Certainly the shares are more authentic 'untouch ables' than anything India can offer; but one would like to be equally sure whether it is possible for even a minor British colony to sink as low as is suggested."

There is a basis for the confidence that satisfactory means can be devised for transferring to creditor countries payments which Germany is obligated to make in the execution of the Dawes plan, provided a considerable movement of German goods can be made acceptable to recipient countries.

Means of Transfers

There are four means of effecting these transfers: (1) Such an expan sion of Germany's industry and com merce as will result in the maximum foreign delivery of goods and serv ices. (2) Such expansion of normal deliveries in kind as can be economi cally developed by special arrange ments between Germany and the Allies. In 1892 approval was given by Congress to the plan for a 27-foot channel, the so-called Narrows Channel. The East Broad Channel, authorized in 1899, provided for a depth of 30 feet and a width of 1200 feet.

the need for still greater depths was so urgent that a new outlet to the sea, 35 feet deep and 1500 feet wide was ordered. This is the present North Broad Channel, completed some 10 years ago. The same depth is carried in a channel 1200 feet wide from President Roads to the Navy Yard.

Some years passed, and even the 35-foot channel seemed inadequate. Recommendations for 40-foot depths were finally successful to the extent that in 1917 Congress approved the project of providing a 40-foot chan-nel, 900 feet wide, for the outer channel only, where the exposed location necessitates a somewhat greater margin of safety for boats entering the harbor. No funds were allotted, however, to carry out the project. In 1924, at the request of the maritime association, a hearing was held by the district engineer, at which a favorable case was made for the improvement.

Naval officers stated that the pro-vision of a 40-foot approach channel would be of great strategic value in would be of great strategic value in connection with the naval dry dock in South Boston, the largest in the world. Measure Defeated

Oh June 1, a week after this hearing, the city council met prepared to pass what was known as the Com-ins ordinance. But one of the mem-bers and author of another plan which had not received favor, objected to its passage on the ground of illegality and following a pro-longed debate it was voted to put the matter over to a special meeting on June 4. But on June 4 the council finally rejected the plan by a vote of 7 to 2, leaving the city unprotected so far as zoning is concerned. Today we are facing a yery serious situation. The council, how-is before the Senate relating to pending legislation, it permits any Senaand as long as he pleases, with or without regard to the question that is being considered." Mr. Capper explains: In the war year, 1917, an attempt was made to stop this method of talking bills to their end by adopting what is known as "Rule 22," which limits debate for one hour to each senator, upon vote of a two-thirds majority of the Senate, after 16 senators have signed a motion to close This rule has proved ineffective. It does not sufficiently protect the country from the member, or small group of members, who for any reaon would prevent necessary legislation from reaching consideration and a vote. Such an exercise of negative power is not contemplated the powers vested in the legislative branch of the Government by the Constitution.

This abuse of power—for it is nothing short of that—has resulted in a state of affairs that too often

SPRINGFIELD PARK LAND MAY BE LOST

Irregular Taking Charged by City Solicitor

SPRINGFIELD. Mass., June 26 (Special)—More than 200 acres of land, taken by the city a year agg for park purposes, may be lost to the city if an opinion given yesterday by Charles H. Beckwith, city solicitor, holds good. Mr. Beckwith by finds in his opinion that the order ter that the taking of the land is consequently invalid.

emphasis on recitation and study e land, the whole procedure must repeated, necessitating another contest in the City Council, with a changed membership whose stand on the project is uncertain. Mayor Parker is known to look with disfavor on retaking the park unless the approximate cost of the development is known in advance. Mr. Beckwith said:

A year ago, the law was changed to provide that before the Park Commission could take land, it must be authorized to do so by the City Council and an appropriation made. In this case, an appropriation was made toward the cost. It is my opinion that the appropriation does not constitute an authorization.

MRS. ROGERS SEEKING ELECTION TO CONGRESS ON SERVICE GOAL

Pledges Support of All Laws if Chosen in Fifth District-I am a Prohibitionist, She Says, in Reply

Mrs. Edith N. Rogers of Lowell, word to the upholding of the Consti-

Mrs logers asks the district to elect her to carry on the work which her hus-band had done for so many years.

Mrs. Rogers' candidacy was sug-gested and supported from the start by many leaders of the Republican Party in the State who knew that she was familiar with the work of her husband and that she had always been his helper and adviser.

ce she reluctantly, at first, allowed her name to be entered in the list of candidates for the Republican nomination, more or less opposition sprang up because her attitude toward prohibition had not been specifically stated. She had discussed the tariff, the hours for labor of women and children and many other questions of particular interest to the voters in the Fifth District, which is strongly industrial in that great woolen and cotton mills as well as shoe factories are situated in it. Queried on Prohibition

Prohibition she did not stress, as she regarded the Eighteenth Amendment as law and, naturally, to be en-forced along with all the other amendments. When queried directly as to her stand on prohibition, she replied that she would, of course, uphold all of the laws of the land as the oath which she would take would specify. She regarded this reply as sufficient, she has told her friends

Backs Law Enforcement

"Why should I say more?" was her query in answer to a reminder that she had been pressed to become more specific and had declined to promise to devote herself especially to enforcement of this law in all of its relationships to other laws.

'I have declared repeatedly that as a member of Congress, I shall ve very careful study to all matters of legislation which may come before that lawmaking body. I shall uphold the Constitution of the United States and use my influence for the enforcement of all existing laws."

The campaign speakers who accompany Mrs. Rogers to the few pub-lic meetings she attends and those who address other mass gatherings in the district tell the voters of Mrs. Rogers' abilities and her fitness for the office to which the Republican Party seeks to elect her.

She was married to Mr. Rogers in 1907, and thereafter was always her husband's chief adviser. She was in her husband's Lowell and Washington offices, and he said to his friends that he placed much dependence upon her views in regard to the governmental and political issues.

Active in War Work In the World War she did work as a nurse in United States Government hospitals in France and the United States, and President Wilson named her a special official Gov-ernment visitor to these institutions. Later, Presidents Harding and Coolidge reappointed her for this work. After the war she interested herself

Mrs. Rogers says: "I think I may say truthfully that I know what this Fifth District needs and what it wants and I will try to serve it to the best of my ability. I feel at home in it. Its people are my friends as they were my husband's and I studied to help him make himself useful as a Representative and I will use this knowledge if the people elect me as his successor.

Mr. Mendum's Commendation

Samuel W. Mendum, a Boston attorney, said to The Christian Science Monitor representative that or years he had known Mrs. Rogers and her husband, and that he, as a member of the Woburn Republican ommittee, had had the satisfaction of seeing Mr. Rogers "carry" Woburn, a strong Democratic city, time and again after the people had come to know and appreciate him. "Mrs. Rogers," said Mr. Mendum, "has an unusual hold on the affections of the people of the Fifth Con-gressional District, because they know her high character and her signal ability. Household Arts, Crafts and Decoration mahogany or maple are commonly regarded as belonging in the category repaid. of things that a carpenter or cabinet maker must do, and often at topnotch prices. To be sure there are many tasks that belong rightfully to the professional, but often certain simple things remain undone because the homemaker lacks confidence.

The Amateur Cabinet Maker and Nineteenth Century Furniture

A banister rail, belished only by the hands that had for years been grasping it for support, gained one of grasping it for support, gained one of the loveliest finishes imaginable. Nothing else had been done to it. Of course one cannot spend years in getting a finish for furniture, but the hired workman is frequently in such a rush to get a gloss that the serviceability and beauty of the piece suffers thereby. There is a middle ground that can often best be attained

Here are some of the secrets that many a woman may use in her own ome. A few hours of hard work is their demand, and many hours of pleasure their reward.

Paint and Varnish Remover Paint and varish remover is one of the fundamental requisites for the amateur cabinet maker. This be purchased at any paint store. The fact must be remembered that the mixture is inflammable and that it will remove paint and varnish wherever it finds them. It does not limit itself to the piece for which it is designed, but is quite as willing to dissolve the finish on near-by floor

The paint remover may be applied with a brush just as if it were paint, If should be left on long enough to soften the surface to be taken off, but not long enough to harden again. A putty knife will scrape away the sticky mass and the tool should be wiped off each time on a cloth. On turned pieces or places hard to get at with the knife, a rag may be used to remove the finish. Repeated applications of paint remover should be made until the surface is down luster. This surface is not injured to the unfinished wood. Water or oil stains cannot be obliterated except by laborious scrap-ing, a process so tedious that it is possible except for the most persevering. A stained surface, howfrom which the varaish has been effaced does not keep the application of a new finish from being satisfactory.

A Linseed Oil Finish

When the old finish is off, a good rubbing down with steel wool will remove any small traces of old varnish and make the surface as smooth and as delightful to feel as constructions are exceedingly unsured to the surface as smooth and as delightful to feel as constructions are exceedingly unsured to the surface and constructions are exceedingly unsured to the surface as constructions are exceedingly unsured to the surface as a surface as the surface as constructions are exceedingly unsured to the surface as a surface as the surface as constructions are exceedingly unsured to the surface as a surface as the surface as constructions are exceedingly unsured to the surface as a surface as the surface only satiny wood can be.

No More Half-soling Shoes

Achievement of Modern Science Invest $1.00, Save $10. Invest $1.00. Save $10.

No more half-soling shoes is the dictum of modern science. For the small cost of 10c per pair leather shoe soles can be treated with the marvelous material—RESISTOL—which is GUARANTEED TO MAKE THE SOLES OUTWEAR THE UPPERS, it also Waterproofs Leather Permanently. It instantly penetrates and impregnates leather soles with a powerful PERMANENT binder which resists all abrasive action—the chief cause of soles wearing out. It is easy to apply. It does not affect appearance of shoes. Does not cause the feet to heat or perspire. For working shoes, hiking, golf or shoes not to be polished it will WATERPROOF and WEARPROOF the uppers. Keeps leather soft, desible. Positively nothing like RESISTOL on the market. Has been put to the broadest practical test and is so good that we make an unlimited GUARANTEE OF SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK!

Make This Convincing Test to Prove Resistol!

Ordinarly either your right or left shoe sole wears out first. We ask you to make this test as severe as possible by treating the sole which has the hardest wear. DO NOT TREAT THE OTHER. In this case Anon touched upon a wide subject, the laughing and smiling aspect of humanity; and I am reof him by having recently reread Hazlitt's essay, "On Wit and Humour"; or, to be more exact, his lecture, for there is a difference between what is composed for spoken delivery and what is written to be read without help of the writer's voice and presence. A lecture is more persuasive in that it travels along without permitting pause for contemplation; the reading of it permits one to realize limitations that might easily escape the listener's For that matter, Hazlitt's is a full measure of analysis and discussion, dealing with a subject that no one can exhaust, and to whose examination different readers will bring different viewpoints. And so, I imagine, thought Francis Bacon, when he dipped quill to set limitations, and wrote: "As for jesting, there be certain things which ought to be privileged from it; namely, religion, matters of state, great persons, any man's present business of impor-tance, any case that deserveth pity.'

One need not altogether agree with Bacon in these reservations, for this same jesting has often proved a stout correcter of abuses, but the comment makes one realize the heavy personal responsibility that rests on the jester. R. B.

We leave no legacy for the future to deal with, and our children's children will not blush for the fourth generation, nor need we for our own characters by antici-

It was given him to speak, and he spoke in true rhyme and measure, and always to the point. He would be grave or gay, humorous or severe, and modestly and honestly. He was for thirty years grinder and leading man in Hailsham's oldest mill, and if his oc-cupation was humble, so was his ap-pearance. See him and you would say, Can there be any genius hidden beneath that dusty old smock-frock and broken-down old hat? His gait too, was against him. As he went tumbling by, a stranger might say, He will be down in a minute! But make his acquaintance and engage his attention, and you would find him . . . no novice in human affairs. The cottage just by the mill held his all, a good wife and a large family of boys and girls. He was happy in his home. Reading and observation were his teachers, and you would find he had profited largely by both.

strokes one of the most marked distinctions between the Greco-Asiatic world and the Roman. Among ancient societies, the Roman was probably that in which, at least among the better classes, woman enjoyed the greatest social liberty and the greatest legal and economic auto There she most nearly approached that condition of moral and civil equality with man which makes her his comrade, and not his slaveequality in which modern civilization sees one of the supreme ends of "oral progress.

The doctrine held by some philoso-

"Virgil, Horace, Ovid, Terence, Plautus, Cicero," says the wife of Dr. Blimber, "what a of honey have we here." Dickens was not educated to enjoy this honey, but Johnson devoured it with a bear's relish. For him those hives were never to be surpassed or equalled; that of Horace alone supplied him with more than eighty mottoes for his Essays. He maintained the classical tradition, and his manner of mise. Greek and Latin, he said, had furnished the poets with all their materials; Homer in fact was the original source, and Latin itself was only the echo of Greek.

"Yet, whatever hope may persuade or reason evince, experience can boast of very few additions to ancient fable. As for Virgil, "the warmest adrhythmed and broken by rare, nat- mirers of the great Mantuan poet can extol him for little more than the skill with which he has, by making his hero both a traveller and a warriour, united the beauties of the Iliad and the Odyssey in one composition: yet his judgment was perhaps sometimes overborne by his avarice of the Homeric treasures; and, for fear of suffering a sparkling ornament to be lost, he has inserted it where it cannot shine with its original splendor. If Virgil could be thus seduced by imitation, there will be little hope that common wits should escape.

Not only is it true that the classics are the best of literature, but fortunately that which survives is probably the best of the classics: Of the ancients, enough remains to excite our emulation and direct our endeavours. Many of the works which time has left us, we know to have been those that were most esteemed, and which antiquity itself considered as models; so that, having the originals, we may, without much regret, lose the imitations." Although his own Dictionary had conferred, as it were, a status on the English language, we know Johnson's opinion of modern literature as compared with ancient—that "the most polished of the present European tongues are nothing more than barbarous degenerations" from Latin and Greek. If to Burke the constitu tion of 1688 was the perfection of And Dickens could make fun of all all political wisdom, to Johnson the classics were the perfection of all language. And who shall gainsay him?—O. F. Christie, in "Johnson the Essayist."

DETROIT TAKES FOURTH PLACE
DETROIT, June 26—Detroit moved up into the first division by defeating St. Louis here, yesterday, by the score of 3 to 2. Cobb's home run with a man on base in the opening inning practically won the game for the Tigers, for it gave his team a two-run lead which St. Louis never overcame. Leonard pitched one of his best games of the year, holding the Browns to eight scattered hits and striking out seven men. He also made a double and a single at hat. It was the seventh straight victory for Detroit. The score:

American Wins in Straight Sets in the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Singles

WIMBLEDON, June 26 (AP)-J. F. Hennessey of Indianapolis, Ind., defeated F. G. Lowe of England, 9-7, 8-6, 6-4, in today's play of the All-England lawn tennis championships.

Hennessey is the only American to reach the last eight in the men's singles. He probably will meet Jean Borotra, the titleholder, in the fifth

The young American star eliminated title Hennessey's superior game at the net and his ability to put over winning strokes enabled him to beat the veteran player who is still considered one of the most dangerous of British stars. Although the American youth won in straight sets, he had to fight every game to the limit. Two sets went to deuce.

Lowe played a sure, accurate game from the back court and was seldom lured to the net. He contented himself by lured to the net. He contented himself by lured to the baseline.

BROAD LIST OF STOCKS IS TRADED IN

Motors and Public Utilities Are Strong Features of Market

NEW YORK, June 26 (P)—Stock prices displayed a strong tone at the opening of today's market. Buying orders were distributed over a broad list with the pools again active in a number of specialties.

Du Pont quickly advanced 2 points, while American Smelting, American Can and Barnet Leather showed initial gains of a point or so.

Havana Electric swiftly ran up more than 4 points, American Can and Market Street Railway prior preferred extended their initial gains to 2 points and Radio Corporation, International Telephone, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and General Electric advanced a point or more before the end of the first half hour. Pierce Arrow prior preferred soared 7 points to a new top at 173. Foreign exchanges opened irregular. Demand sterling advanced slightly to $4.8574, but French francs and Italian lire sank to new 1925 lows as 4.55½ and 3.62 cents, respectively. Danish kroner touched a new high at 19.67

Indications that the July reinvest-ment demand was unusually heavy in the stock market, probably because of the stock market, probably because of the relatively slow yield obtainable in high grade bonds, was seen in the strength of high grade dividend pay-ing stocks.

The call money renewal rate was marked up to 4½ per cent in response to the increased demand for funds in connection with mid-year settlement. Bond Prices Heavy

Maintenance of firm money rates exerted a restrictive influence on today's early bond trading with the result that prices drifted irregularly lower. Coincident with the drop in the French franc to the year's lowest price, some of the French obligations yielded to increased selling pressure, but the foreign list on the whole showed little change. Domestic railroad liens also displayed hesitation, but some of the St. Paul issues were strengthened by the defense of the strengthened by the defense of the plan on the part of the bond-holders'

FRESH REACTION

CHICAGO, June 26 (AP)—Sharp new setbacks in the value of wheat took place early today. Liquidating sales based largely on favorable crop conditions northwest were a weight on the market.

TRADING QUIET

LONDON, June 26—Trading on the stock market today was quiet, due to the approaching week-end holiday. Specialties were strong. Gilt-edged securities advanced on organized banking support. Home rails were firm on the friendly tone manifest in the wage discussions now under way.

French loans were weak, reflecting the continued decline in the franc. Greek loans railied after their break on the revolution in Gneece. Selling of these issues, however, was negligible. Chinese securities railied, having been oversold on adverse news from China.

Kaffir stocks were dull, with Paris taking profits. Total half year's dividends of the Rand Gold Mines amounted to £4,137,000, a decrease of £500,000.

Oils were easier, although trading was narrow. Rubber issues were checkered. Royal Dutch was 32. Rio Tintos 38.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR ACCEPTANCES FOLLOWS RATE RISE

WASHINGTON, June 26-Increased demand for acceptances of longer maturities, together with a falling of in the supply of new bills, followed the rise on May 20 from 3% to 3% per cent in the offering rate on 60-90 day acceptances in Chicago and New York, a statement just issued by the Federal Reserve Board points out. Demand on the whole on 90-day maturities remained unchanged during the period from May 21 to June 17, as the result of this situation.

Short bills at the end of the period were somewhat easier and longer maturities slightly firmer, the strongest demand being for 90-day bills, an actual scarcity of which was reported toward the end of the period, while 36-60 day bills remained in fair supply. In the New York market, after the rise in rate, the excess supply noted in May was gradually reduced and at the end of the period dealers portfolios were reduced to a new low point for the year.

The buying rate of the Federal Reserve Bank was raised 1/2 per cent on 90-day bills on June 12 in New York and June 15 in Boston.

President W. H. Woodin says, in part: "The buying of new equipment by the railroads during the year has been intermittent rather than steady. The rebuilding and repairing of old equipment has been appreciably less in volume than in prior years.

"Buying for foreign delivery has been in small volume. Competition in all branches has been no less keen than heretofore—with a resulting nairow profit margin. An important factor in the production of the year's earnings has been the business done in the manufacture and sale of miscellaneous products.

manufacture and sale of miscenaneous products.

"The company enters upon its new year with a fair amount of business on its books. It may reasonably be expected that before the close of the year now carrent, buying by the railroads will be resumed in increased volume, and that the company will obtain its full share of such business."

VICTOR CONCERN LONG A BONANZA

Dividends as High as $80 a Share Annually Paid-Radio Makes Inroads

PHILADELPHIA. June 26 — Although there has been no official ansouncement, it can be definitely stated on good authority that no dividend will be paid on Victor Talking Machine Co. common for the second quarter of this year. It is expected that stockholders will be notified to this effect in due course. The company has been paying dividends at the rate of 2 percent quarterly, the last payment having been made. April 15, and the next payment would have been due to be paid. July 15. The board met Thursday, but took no action.

paid July 15. The board met Thursday, but took no action.

It is the impression that dividends will not be resumed until the present production program, which includes incorporation of radio equipment in cabinets, becomes well established and earning position again made secure. As an aid to economical operation, employees have been advised that all vacations will be suspended this summer.

Fallure of the directors of Victor Talking Machine Company to declare the customary dividend of $2 a share quarterly on the common stock, thereby giving rise to the suspicion that disbursements have been discontinued, calls attention in a striking manner to the inroads made by the radio on the business of the talking machine industry.

Organized in 1901, Victor was one of the pioneers of the industry, and as such reaped pioneer profits. While many talking machine companies were unable to survive compelition, Victor until recently possessed a record of extraordinary prosperity. In the last 24 years it never failed to pay common dividends, and during this period disbursements have been so liberal as to return to the original investors many times the amount put into the company at its inception.

The following table shows dividends distributed per share of Victor Talking Machine common during the period 1901-24, inclusive:

Capitalization of the company consists of $6900 preferred stock and $34.236 $86,000 common, both of $100 par value.
171 Last year net income available for the common was equal to only $3.40 a share, compared with $18.77 a share in 1923.

Though a deficit of $1,616,243 resulted after payment of common dividends last year, the company's treasury condition was sound as of Dec. 31, 1924, with current assets of $25,768,749 and current liabilities of $5,652,625.

While the apparent passing of the common dividend after unbroken payments since 1901, undoubtedly reflects comparatively poor earnings caused by radio competition, it is quite possible that the current unprofitable period represents a passing phase in the company's history. By preserving for posterity the works of masters the Victrola covers a field which the radio cannot touch and which will probably trola covers a field which the radio cannot touch and which will probably continue to exist.

In addition, the Victor management is not unmindful of possibilities for profits by taking advantage of the radio popularity, and has radiocast concerts by its artists in order to increase the demand for its records.

The company is expected to put a radio loud speaker on the market in the near future, and has made arrangements with Radio Corporation of America for incorporation of a radio receiving set in the Victor cabinets along with the talking machine instrument.

SHORT INTEREST IS SAID TO BE LARGE

NEW YORK, June 26—The opinion prevails in the financial district that a larger short interest now exists in the stock market than at any time since the first of the year, it being the kind of market to invite short a selling owing to suggestions by most of the commission houses, floor traders and professional operators to sell stocks.

BUFFALO, ROCHESTER

LEASE IS APPROVED The board of managers of the Delaware & Hudson Railway approved the lease of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh for 999 years, providing for rental sufficient to pay the 6 per cent net annual dividend on the $6,000,000 outstanding preferred and the $10,500,000 outstanding common, the payment of all fixed charges and the assumption of maturing debts.

The Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh directors approved the lease of their property to the Delaware & Hudson May 1. The meeting of the Delaware & Hudson stockholders will be called in between 30 and 40 days.

CUSTOMS RULINGS NEW YORK, June 26 (Special)—Sustaining a claim of George Borgfeldt & Co., Baltimore, the Board of United States General Appraisers finds that small music boxes with cranks, taxed at 70 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 1414, tariff act of 1922, as toys, should have been taxed at 40 per cent under paragraph 1443 as musical instruments.

Shell bead articles, imported by A. Kriloff & Co., Chicago, claimed to be dutiable as beads at 55 per cent under paragraph 1403, are held by the board to have been correctly taxed at 60 per cent under the same paragraph.

Miniature articles of furniture, baby carriages, etc., imported by George Borgfeldt & Co. are held by the board to be dutiable at 40 per cent under paragraph 399, as manufactures of metal, rather than as assessed, at 70 per cent under paragraph 1414, 1922 act, as toys, the articles being composed entirely of base metal.

The Mexican mechanic in Mexico City receives $78 a month as compared with an average monthly wage for a mechanic in the United States of $175. The former will have for miscellaneous expenses each month $17, while the latter has $71 over and above the necessities of life. The ratio between other skilled workers in the two countries is more or less the same.

The Mexican day laborer receives $40 a month, while the average in the United States is about $80, but the Mexican peon's living expenses are rated so low that theoretically he has each month the same amount for miscellaneous expenses that the American laborer has, that is $9. Mexican miners receive only $21 a month and quarters, as compared with $77 received by miners in Tennessee, where miners wages are lower than in other states. Colum Gas & Elec 5s '27.

Therefore the American manufacturer, when making a study of what opportunity the Mexican market offers and what it can absorb, must take into account the limited earning capacity and purchasing power of the masses in Mexico.

From the comparison made it is easy From the comparison made it is easy to realize that the average Mexican I family is not in the market for break fast foods, washing powder, silk hosiery, aluminum kitchenware and the other numerous articles that make up the daily purchases of the American house.

Good Buyer of Necessities

But he, our Mexican neighbor, is a pretty good customer in such lines as lard and lard compounds, bacon and hams, canned salmon, flour, automobiles, cotton textiles, machinery, locomotives and railway equipment, chemicals, and numberless other staple products. The total value of Mexico's purchases from the United States during 1924 amounted to $135,076,703.

NEW RECORD LIKELY FOR MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES IN 1923

American manufacturing industries in 1923 attained a stride comparable with the abnormal activity of 1919, it was shown today in Census Bureau reports for New York and Pennsylvania, the greatest two manufacturing states.

Their combined output in 1922 for New York and Pennsylvania, the greatest two manufacturing states.

Their combined output in 1923, nearly $16,400,000,000, exceeded the 1919 figures and was worth more than in 1904 and any year prior to that. Should like increases be shown for other states it is believed the 1919 record total of $62,418,000 will be exceeded.

New York manufactures were valued at $8,960,593,000, an increase of 28.5 per cent over 1921, the preceding census year. An average of 1,150,901 workers were employed, an increase of 15 per cent, and they were paid $1,582,006,000, or 21.4 per cent more than in 1921.

Clothing manufacture was listed as the State's chief industry.

The output in Pennsylvania was crease over 1921.

Employees totaled 1,095,066, and

CATTLE PRICES AT YEAR'S HIGH

Choice Steers Scarce-Other Grades Firm-Hogs Steady and Sheep Strong

CHICAGO, June 26 (Special) -

chicago, June 26 (Special)—As the season advances, more grass-fed the season advances, more grass-fed to the season advances, more grass-fed to cattle are coming to market in proportion to the number that have been grain fed. The good-to-choice long-fed steers are getting comparatively scarce, and are selling at the highest price of the season.

Lately, a good many low-grade southwestern range steers have been received that have found a narrow outlet because they showed poor beefmaking quality. Some of these cattle of Texas origin sold as low as $6@ 7.50.

There is a good outlet for steers of good finish, but a very limited demand for low-grade, trashy stock with little fat and no quality. Dry weather has been forcing in a good many of the thin cattle from the southwest to Kansas City, from which market they are being shipped to Chicago.

Steady to strong prices have obtained for the better grades this week, although the supply was somewhat in excess of last week, but not enough to upset the upward tendency of the market. Some competition from eastern sources has helped to make a strong market, and choice stuff was in good demand.

Fat yearling and best heavy steers were listed up to $72, with many fat cattle selling at $110@11. Grassers were slow to move at $8.50@3.75. Common grassy Texas cattle were quoted at $6.50@8.

Fat cows and helfers that had been in grain fed, were relatively scarce, and a sold from $$ to $11.50. Some prime everling helfers sold as high a $11.50.

Fat cows and helfers that had been grain fed, were relatively scarce, and sold from $$ to $11.50. Some prime yearling helfers sold as high as $11.75. Most of the supply of common and medium grassers sold at $4@6.

Canners and cutters were steady at medium grassers sold at $4@6.

Canners and cutters were steady at $2.75@3.85. Bulls were stronger at $5.25@5.50, this the, best bolognas at $5.25@6.50. Calves were quoted steady at $9.216.50. Stockers and feeders were stronger at $3.50.65.25.

The run of hogs has been a trifle over last week, but prices held fairly steady. Packers were not much in evidence, but shippers took a large theavy hogs sold at $13.65, and many of the $25 to $00-pound class moved at $13.40.350.

Strong weight lights

Strong weight lights were bought at $13.00 and the underweight lights at $12.75.00 and the underweight lights at $12.75.00 and the underweight underweight $12.00 and the underweight underweight $12.00 and the underweight underweight $12.75.00 and the underweight $12.75.00 and the underweight underweight $12.75.00 and the underweight $12.75.00 and

Sheep were steady to strong, the receipts being somewhat lower than last week. A few loads of Idaho lambs last week. A few loads of Idaho lambs were on the market, and sellers were holding the best at $17. Good natives are quoted at $16.50, and the plainer grades at $15.50 to $16.

Yearlings of light weight are wanted at $13 to $14. Old sheep are steady, with a slack demand for the heavy ewes, selling at $5@6. Good lightweight ewes are in demand at $6 to $7.50.

Among the Railroads

By FRANKLIN SNOW THE Illinois Central Railroad operates about 6200 miles of line through 13 states, controlling also the Central of Georgia Railway and, through that, the Ocean Steamship Company from Savannah to Boston and New York. In 1924, despite a de-

Company from Savannah to Boston and New York. In 1924, despite a decrease in gross revenues from $187,000,000 to $174,000,000, the Hilinois Central increased its net from $25,000,000 to $23,100,000.

The increase in net earnings was accomplished partly as a result of reduced maintenance expenditures on the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley, one of its principal subsidiaries. The operating ratio of this road was reduced from $3.2 to 73.1 per cent from 1923 to 1924, principally by economies in maintenance of way and equipment. The Hilinois Central proper lowered its operating ratio from 80 per cent in 1923 to 77.7 per cent in 1924, the economies in transportation and maintenance expenditures being in substantially the same proportion. Last year, $29,000,000 was spent in additions and betterments, including the Chicago electrification.

Under C. H. Markham, the fillinois Central has progressed in many ways, conspicuous among which is in the attitude of its patrons. Few rallroads are more favorably regarded by their patrons than is the Illinois Central. This is the result of an assiduous public relations campaign, augmented by regular newspaper advertising of an "Institutional" character, carried on ever since the termination of federal control. President Markham's policy has been successful because it has been based on fair dealing with his patrons and they, in turp, have displayed a friendly attitude toward the road.

Illinois Central operates through, or touches, the attitude of Illinois of Hillinois of Hilli

Through freight service and through rates in connection with the Central of Georgia and the Ocean Steamship Company are maintained between New England, New York and the south. Transcontinental Freight Decreases

The constantly decreasing freight traffic which the transcontinental rail lines are carrying has been feit by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul to a greater extent than many of the other lines in the west.

Through him it has been possible to get a glimpse of the orchestral traditions that are being built up in one at least of the centers of American music, and to guess something of the ideals that lie behind them. It must be admitted that the glimpse was partial: Sokoloff had not his own orchestra. But the two concerts he gave at Queen's Hall with the London Symphony Orchestra on May 29 and June 5 afforded strong evidence of als determination to approach composition without any bias, and to his interpretations untrammeled by any hereditary tradi-Programmatic Originality

It is good to be freed from convention, even if one cannot agree with the man who does it. Sokoloff took Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony too slowly, and in the second movement of Saint-Saëns' fifth pianoforte contiger cub bounding upon the scene. From the first to the very last notes of Saint-Säens' fifth pianoforte concerto, Rubinstein appeared extraordinarily master of himself, the keyboard and the whole situation. There was no hesitancy, no ostentation in was no hesitancy, no ostentation in was no hesitancy. He was simply "right there," and his elegant energy and lucidity made him a most successful exponent of point 'that spoke well for him was the discrimnating difference he made between the solo part in the concerto and the concertante piano part in Læffler's "Pagan Poem." It was precisely in the qualities that lie higher and deeper than ordinary musical attainment that the pianoforte recital recently given by Miss Fanny Davies at Wigmore Hall was so rich. Not many planists in-terpret Bach with her degree of understanding and not one can interpret Schumann and Brahms with greater authority. She received the Schumann tradition direct Clara Schumann and she also knew Brahms. Her Bach-Brahms-Schu-mann program on June 8 was an event not to be missed, especially her playing of the little known Variations by Brahms (Op. 9), on a theme by Schumonn. The Gibbons Tercentenary Another concert with a specialized program that attracted a good deal of attention was that given at Æolian. Hall on June 5 to commemorate the tercentary of Orlando Gibbons (1583-1625). An evening of his dignified, strong contrapuntal music is not so austere an experience as the readers of old histories might suppose. Gib-bons was not reactionary. With the Oriana Singers (conducted by C. Kennedy Scott) to perform his anthems and madrigals, with six fine string players led by Charles Woodhouse to play the fantasias for strings, and with Bernhard Ord (well known in Cambridge musical circles) to play the harpsichord solos, the program presented music that was vital and likable on its own merits -not mere antiquarian pageantry. Within certain limits and within the idiom of his own time Gibbons was a great composer, and his "Silver Swan" remains one of the lovellest madrigals ever written. Morris' New "Motet"

It was a strange experience to come fresh from this concert to the Moeran concert of new British chamber music at Wigmore Hall next day (June 6) and to find—not the wild dissonances of modernity, but the very same idiom! Of course, the explanation of the miracle is that the "Motet" for string quartet, here played for the first time in public. was hy R. O. Morris. No one knows nicolor, in the approximately 3,000,-

000 feet of film requisitioned by Douglas Fairbanks' forthcoming film, "The Black Pirate," differs from the raphy or negative departments. Certain costly photographic steps have been replaced by simpler, more economical steps. A single coated film is now used, in place of the former double coated film, which produced certain perplexities of projection.

Certain sequences of forthcoming Technicolor films seen at the laboratory show an undoubted gentling of former color values. Flesh tones are the natural aspects, which emphasize centage of colored sequences in each film. How large a part of the public can be educated to complete colored films is problematical, for it is an intricate, highly artistic effect they tomed to the black and white tones calling for a different degree of visual activity may become only gradu-ally accustomed. The theory under-exercise felicitously. There is the question of adaptation of taste of the livelier flow of change in color

entering public response to all-color

But Technicolor is undoubtedly the best evolution of the problem and would be less worthy if its originators were sitting back in their chairs

now and saying, "We have made a perfect thing. There is nothing left for us to do."

The process which will be used

thus been solved

THE problem of recording motion | the two pictures and could thus not pictures in natural colors is one which has occupied the inventive effort and experimental industry mitted through a single camera lens, then split up without distorting or blurring the images, thus simultanof chemists and others for the last 20 years. Boston, never significant as a city in the mechanism of the motion picture industry, has at least given to the screen the process known as Technicolor, which is un-doubtedly the best evolution that has yet been devised of the problem of color in films. The inventors and ex-perimenters of Technicolor would be the last to claim that the process is complete and that they can hope for no greater perfection. It has succeeded in doing away with a very dubious aspect of former processes. namely, the heavy scarlet and green fringes that have stood between the observer and comfortable contem-plation of the filmed subjects.

A representative of The Christian Science Monitor has recently paid a visit to the plant of the Technicolor visit to the plant of the Technicolor Corporation in Boston. This visit followed a visit paid in 1923 when "Toll of the Sea," Technicolor's first film, was being finally assembled and represented a complete and happy innovation in the field of the colored film. Other pictures have since been made, some still unreleased. Many of the so-called super-productions of the last year have had colored sequences interjected among the black and white sequences. It is possible that, for the future of Technicolor, these interjections were wise, for they have given the motion picture public the direct opportunity for judgment upon the advantages of the process over the ordinary black and

Special Equipment

The experimental station is a remarkable exhibit of machinery, some of it enormously delicate in design lying Technicolor is that the natural and capacity, deliberately evolved color values supplied modify visual color's mission. There was no equipment for the major detail to be borrowed from past experiments. Boston capital originally underwrote Technicolor experimentation, and if Boston has regretted at times no part in the geography of the films it may derive a certain satisfaction for having been the home of Technicolor which, whatever the degree of its development, must be owned to be a pleasant adventure in beautifying the screen which can do with such an influence.

In the beginning it was neces sary to take all color pictures in two component parts, one through a red glass, the other through green, superimposing both upon each other on the screen or the film itself. The principal trouble with this method was that sometimes the photographed object had opportunity to move in the interval between the taking of

LABOR AIDED BY LEAGUE ACTION

Report Shows System Grow ing of Having Officers at Geneva

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, June 15-The growth of a system of accredited representa-tives in Geneva to maintain permanent contact with the International Labor Office of the League of Nations, is shown in the annual report of the director of the office, M. Albert Thomas, to the seventh ses sion of the International Labor Conference in Geneva.

The Japanese Government was the first to adopt this plan by appointing a high Government official as its representative and also head of a mission of a number of officials which was responsible for keeping in permanent touch with the office. Japan has been followed by Poland and Sweden in appointing such special representatives. The Brazilian Government recently set up an organization in Geneva which practically amounts to an embassy to the League of Nations, and contains a special department for liaison with the Inter-national Labor Office. Finland, Hunthe Irish Free State, and Canada have permanent representatives in Geneva who are accredited both to the International Labor Office and the League of Nations. Albania, Bulgaria, Chile, China, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Italy and Venezuela have instructed their diplomatic or consular representatives to maintain liaison with the International Labor Office and the eague of Nations, or with the International Labor Office only.

The various activities of the League are well illustrated by a simple outline of a few of the problems now being dealt with under its auspices in the signatory countries.

The Austrian Chamber of Deputies has adopted a provision authorizing the Government to increase by 331/2 per cent the import duties on industrial products coming from countries which do not apply the eight-hour

Formal notification has been relands Government has ratified the convention fixing the minimum age

Austria and Belgium in 1924 ratified the convention adopted at the first session of the International Labor Conference held at Washington in 1919, which prohibits the employment of women a nght (which is defined as a period of at least 11 consecutive hours, including the interval between 10 o'clock in the evening and 5 o'clock in the mornng.) Thirteen states have now ratified the convention.

Steps have been taken, meanwhile, in other countries toward ratification. In France, an act has been passed authorizing unconditional ratification. In Hungary, the National Assembly has voted a bill for in-corporating the provisions of the convention in the Hungarian code. In Chile and Denmark ratification has been recommended to the com-petent authority during the last Are. Phone Ocean City 929-W. Adults. year. Seven states have so far recommended such ratification, and in provinces of Canada (Nova and Saskatchewan) Parliament has passed a resolution approvin" the principles of the convention.

In his latest report on Western Samoa under the Mandate of New Zealand the Administrator recounts that he had called together the emresult of their deliberations the inlabor instituted, and wages were in-

Elsewhere in the report is shown the effect of thus putting the Chinese laborer on a par with the white or Samoan repulation. They are doing more and better work now that they are being paid by results. Moreover, illness during working hours is fast disappearing, and malingering is greatly reduced.

Industrial and Labor Information recently contained an article on child labor in the United States. In this t was stated that, according to the census of occupations in 1920, there were in the United States 2,773,506 wage earners between the ages of 10 and 17, of whom 1,060,958 were less than 16 years of age. It was added can Federation of Labor, dated Jan. 1925, recalled the fact that the 1920 census took no account of wage earners under 10 years of age, although, the Federation stated, there are thousands of children under 10 years of age who are working in industry. Further, the inquiries of the National Child Labor Committee had revealed the fact that there are children less than 6 years of age who are working all day.

AUSTRIA OFFERS TOURIST ADVANTAGES

VIENNA, June 2 (Special Correspondence)—Austria is pushing as rapidly as possible every effort to induce foreigners to visit the country this summer. The Minister of Commerce, Dr. Hans Schürff, met representatives of the press, and described both the problems being encountered in this work and also the special advantages which Austria was prepared to offer travelers.

ing on tourist propaganda for the or approximately what Switzerland put aside last year for the same pur-pose. Austria today, however, is allowed only 10,000 schillings to be spent in this way. Tourist pamphlets being distributed mainly in the United States, in Germany, and in Italy, although the hope is expressed that through more funds such material can be more widely distributed

ALBANIAN CHAIR INSTITUTED BELGRADE, June 5 (Special Correspondence)—At a recent meeting of the council of the philosophic faculty it was decided to institute chair for Albanian language at Belgrade University. Dievad Korcha was elected first holder of the chair. This appointment, besides extending the sphere of the philological section of the university, should be considered as a tribute to the growing closeness of relations between the two nations, Albania and Jugoslavia. 8-90, The

Bradford Firms Confident of Ability to Cope With Modes of Paris

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, June 15-London is to have its own fashion model house within the next few months. British models, designed by British artists, made of British material, and displayed by British mannequins, are to compete with Paris for the dress

It is the ambition of Bradford to secure the women's dress trade in the same way that it already holds the men's trade, for Bradford needs buyers for the material made by 250,000 workpeople in the wool trade.

When explaining the scheme to the press at the Bradford Chamber of Commerce Pavilion at the Empire Exhibition, Sir Henry Whitehead Bradford knows quite well that it is because the models in the Paris houses are made of French materials that the dressmakers pur-chase French materials, and not Bradford. And yet, according to the Mayor of Bradford, the textile goods sold in the United States, Spain, and Italy are produced by skilled workers from Bradford.

J. Emsley, president of the Brad-ford Chamber of Commerce, said: We discovered last year at Wembley that there was a lack of continuity between the manufacturers and the wearer of the goods. We felt that we must provide some permanent connecting link. A manufacturer in Yorkshire told me that he showed a woman buyer from America some new material, but she saw nothing in it. So sure was he America some new material, but she saw nothing in it. So sure was he of its success, however, that he sent it to a making-up house in London and had a coat made. He then showed it to the woman buyer, and she ordered 50 coats at once to be made of the material she had re-jected as unsuitable for women's Capital is being subscribed by members of the Bradford Chamber of Commerce for a fashion model house where we can show the world that we can provide just as artistic dress as the Paris houses.

Bradford used to be content to ake the foundations for the make the foundations for the women's dresses, but there are no foundations now! Bradford used to make the buckram for the skirts, but they have no buckram now! Bradford has now got to make the dresses, and when a Yorkshireman is determined to do a thing, he does it. I think we can bring the whole dress trade to London.

When the French people wanted to get the dress trade into their

When the French people wanted to get the dress trade into their country, they asked the Empress Eugénie if she would allow herself to be dressed by the fashion model house. We are the only country that has a leading lady to help us. Even if the French will not buy from us, we can get the American dress trade, and that of our own domnions. Last and that of our own dominions. Last year, when we showed Bradford models, the managing director of one of the largest stores in New York bought duplicates of every one.

In spite of M. Caillaux's disclaimer that he was not a magician and that it was not by the

waving of a wand that the finances of France could be restored after the blunders of many years, it must be confessed that the majority of French citizens, including the parties of the Right, expected a great deal from him, so that the slipping of the franc at once produced cries of disappointment. M. Caillaux is a pricked bubble, exclaimed those who had most sedulously fostered the legend of his superior expert knowledge and skill. From the beginning that was the rock on which judicious observers anticipated he would be wrecked. M. Caillaux could only justify himself by complete success. Failure on the technical terrain meant that he would be rejected as a false prophet.

When he was chosen by M. Painlevé to undertake the gigantic task which had been neglected both by the Bloc National and by the Bloc des Gauches under M. Herriot, he had many enemies who decided not to oppose him until it was seen whether he was really the genius he had been held to be by his friends. The Nationalist minority in the French Parliament cannot be accused of hindering him in his work. The minority, after a perfunctory protest, resolved to forget that his personality was obnoxious to them, and gave him a fair chance. The real opposition came from an unexpected quarterthat is to say, from the Left. The character of M. Caillaux is one which does not arouse sympathy, and when he, with his customary stiffness, attacked the budget of his predecessor, he immediately lost the whole-hearted Socialist support. He was antagonistic to M. Herriot and the Socialists on several grounds. In the first place, he definitely declared that the 1925 budget, which is nearly six months' overdue, was not balanced as had been claimed, but showed a deficit of 4,000,000,000 francs. Such frankness was naturally distasteful to the Left; and although M. Caillaux is to be congratulated on his courage, he is not to be commended for tact. In the second place, the Socialists, just before the fall of M. Herriot, had brought forward a scheme which was accepted by the Government for the imposition of a specific tax on capital. M. Caillaux flatly showed his aversion for such a plan. In his view it was inopportune, to say

Setting aside altogether the discussion of its merits, regarded theoretically, he found two decisive objections to its adoption at this moment. It could not, he said, be put into effect for two years at the earliest. And it would require the construction of a gigantic financial machinery, which does not exist. Indeed, France has never been able to collect efficiently the tax on income, because it has not a sufficient number of trained officers and because, generally, the machinery of collection is inadequate. Another objection is that socialistic legislation of this character will probably cause a still larger exodus of capital from the

The chief problem which any Finance Minister must face is that of restoring confidence. flow can confidence be restored if the menace of the most unwelcome measures is held over the possessing classes? It is true that efforts are being made to bring back the immense sums that have been exported from France, to the detriment of French currency. But it is doubtful whether they will succeed, for in these days of financial interchanges it is easy to transfer private wealth, and it is difficult to compel citizens to bring back their wealth.

The experience of Germany in this matter is significant, and although it has been charged against Germany that the Government, for political purposes, aided and abetted the exportation of capital, experts are mostly in agreement that, even though the Government had done its best, it would have discovered the impossibility of locking the doors.

Another point of issue which has arisen between M. Caillaux and the Socialists is to the order in which financial operations should be made. M. Caillaux laid it down that the preliminary condition was to balance the budget and fix the franc. After the franc was pinned and the budget was a completely sincere and honest budget, then it would be time to consider fiduciary purification and a possible return to a gold monetary basis, with the transformation of all the state's obligations to a gold standard. The Socialists, on the other hand, believe that, if a gigantic monetary reform is not conceivable before comparative stabilization and budgetary sincerity, at any rate, the two operations should be conducted more or less simultaneously. In addition, M. Caillaux has been reproached with imposing antidemocratic taxes, the raising of postal rates being given as one example. Such a reproach, although it would have a demagogic appeal, is, it would appear, somewhat exaggerated. Letters now cost for their transmission only twenty-five centimes-which is absurdly low, when one considers that the franc is worth only a fourth part of what it was worth before the war. The Caillaux proposal was to increase the charge to thirty centimes. There are other points of difference, and although a compromise was possible, M. Caillaux took up the attitude that might have been expected of him—the attitude of take it or leave it.

What is now the outlook? It will be difficult to make any prediction. For some reason, which is doubtless unjustified, it has always been believed that if once the franc fell to twenty to the dollar or a hundred to the pound, it might start on a toboggan ride, the end of which would be disaster. In the economic situation of France, there is absolutely nothing which should provoke the apprehensions which have been expressed on all hands. France is economically sound on condition that the state proceeds without delay to put its financial house in order and ruthlessly refuses to listen to the protests of persons who have either political or financial axes to grind.

There has grown up, in comparatively recent times, in both Europe and the United States, actuated and prompted by the laudable determination of society to observe the admonition to temper justice with mercy, a fairly well defined legalistic system variously referred to as parole, indeterminate sentence, and suspended sentence, all left, more or less indefinitely, to the discretion of the courts or magistrates, or some official board or commission. Now the disposition seems to be to observe, studiously and without prejudice, the effects of this system, first as reflected upon society as a whole, and secondly upon the individuals who have been the objects of official mercy or special consideration. The subject must be regarded in its broad and impersonal aspects, of course. There are exceptions to all general rules. Every observing person probably would be able to enumerate specific instances in which the application of the rule of mercy has corrected what otherwise would have been a serious injustice, or where reformation of the individual has been aided or hastened by the willingness of society to condone a more or less serious offense.

But it is in its larger aspects that the problem presents itself for thoughtful consideration. It should not be forgotten that the mitigation of punishment through the exercise of the parole or pardoning power, or the suspension of sentences, comes only after there has been a conviction by court or jury following the introduction and weighing of testimony which has established culpability beyond the shadow of a reasonable doubt. That is the basis upon which the penalties of the law are imposed. Thus it follows that the object of special consideration who is allowed to go free on promise of good behavior, or who is permitted to serve but a brief period of the term of imprisonment which the law prescribes as the penalty for his misdeeds, is no less guilty in the eyes of the law, and in the estimation of those against whom he has offended, than those who, lacking friendly aid or influence, are sent on to prison to pay in full for their sins against an outraged society. Fundamentally, and more than theoretically, the effort to appeal to the self-interest of the offender can be defended, and probably it can be shown to be more efficacious than to hold over him the fear of continued punishment. The aim is, admittedly, to bring about reformation, and it is in recognition of this fact that in many countries the tendency has been to reward those prisoners who sincerely desire to atone for their wrongs by obedience and repentance. In the year 1817 the first law was passed by the State of New York providing for commutation of sentence in return for continued good behavior. In 1836 a similar law was passed by the State of Tennessee. A little later Ohio, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Illinois, Oregon, California, Missouri, Nevada, Maine, New Hampshire, Minnesota, Kansas, Alabama, New Jersey and Rhode Island adopted, in the order named, laws of similar import.

There seems to be quite general agreement among students of the subject that the operation of the more humane rule regarding punishment has been helpful. But it is stated upon reliable authority that the anticipations of the early advocates of the system as to its efficacy for the reformation of convicts have realized. Political and individual influences seem in many cases to have induced the extension of privileges in cases where the conduct and deportment of the immediate beneficiary have not merited particular mercy. The need. it is pointed out, is for a more intelligent survey of the matter than has ever been attempted. Human experience is at best an unsafe guide, but out of it there sometimes comes a warning that should not go unheeded.

When the European statesmen seek an arrangement that will meet the demands of conflicting interests, they usually speak of finding a "formula." When Raymond Poincaré was Premier of France the "formula" he constantly stressed was "sanctions," a word that thereby gained a world-wide currency. Now his successor as Minister of Foreign Affairs, Aristide Briand, has to find a "formula" which will satisfy both the British as to future peace on the Rhine and the new allies of France in central and eastern Europe as to security behind their new frontiers.

The Distinction Between Coercion and Aggression

It is not an easy obstacle to get around, for his British colleagues have stated in the clearest terms that they will neither join France in a one-sided guarantee against German aggression on the Rhine, nor raise a finger to uphold the frontiers of eastern and central Europe, as now drawn. Austen Chamberlain has stated categorically that the Rhine pact must be bilateral. that is, it must assure Germany against French invasion as much as France against another German inroad. Had such a pact been in force in 1914, the German Government could not have been in any doubt as to where England stood, and in 1923 M. Poincaré could not have authorized the Ruhr occupation without English consent. The "sanctions" formula, therefore, seems about to be superseded.

But the moment France agrees to recognize a distinction between the western and eastern frontiers of Germany, there will be great uneasiness in the new states that depend on France for the maintenance of their boundaries. Here M. Briand needs all his resourcefulness to find a formula that will satisfy both England and Germany on the one side and Poland and Czechoslovakia on the other. The "formula" which M. Briand suggested in the explanation of his arrangement with Mr. Chamberlain, and which he gave to his Cabinet colleagues in Paris, lay in the distinction between military acts of aggression and those of coercion, so that in order to enforce existing treaties France could send its forces through German territory without committing an act of aggression. It is a very ingenious interpretation of the new pact, and if it is accepted, as much emphasis may be put on the word "coercion" in the future as there has been on "sanctions" in the immediate past.

But a line so finely drawn as that between "aggression" and "coercion," when justifying military measures that to non-diplomatists look very much like plain war is, of course, liable to serious abuse. When Benito Mussolini ordered the bombardment of Corfu he called it a "reprisal." When the United States marines land in Central America it is always to "protect" American interests, though often such an act may decide which way a local revolution is to turn. But if M. Briand will consent to have an international body, like the League of Nations, decide when a "coercive" move is justified, and not rely on the authorization of such a one-sided body as the Reparations Commission, as M. Poincaré did when he sent the French army into the Ruhr, or on national sovereignty alone as the kaiser did when he signed the war declarations in 1914, he will have gone far to win general confidence in the good faith and pacific intents of his countrymen.

Since the advent of modern printing machinery there have almost disappeared from the

'shops" and composing rooms those itinerant craftsman who journeyed from city to city, almost at will, carrying, besides their light baggage, the indispensable printer's rule, the emblem of their trade and, in earlier times, the only letter of recommendation or traveling card necessary to insure them employment in any town, large or small. Editors of country-town papers who supervised the mechanical processes of their own offices, and the foremen of the printing departments of the papers in the larger cities, dealt considerately and generously with these journeying journeymen. Upon their whims depended, quite often, the appearance of their publications at the time set. The workmen frequently refused to consider themselves obligated to continue work when the mood moved them to pack up and seek new fields a hundred or more miles distant.

All this changed with the adoption of the typesetting machines now in use in nearly every newspaper office in the United States, and the stabilization of what a well-known American writer has referred to as a "good loose trade." With the increasing number and size of newspapers, steady employment has been given to a greater number of printers, with the result that the itinerant journeyman has almost disappeared. All this change has been wrought within about a third of a century, and while the transition was rapid, comparatively speaking, it was gradual enough to make it possible for even the veterans of the case to master the mechanics of the linotype and its derivatives. But there are those who today call themselves master printers who would be anable, if called upon, to take "stick" and "rule" and compete successfully with the silver-haired men who learned their trade in the days when apprentices and journeymen stood for long hours, day and night, under dim lamps, and with deft fingers and swiftly moving hands set, in short "takes," the matter which, assembled made up the printed pages.

In Colorado City, recently, at the spacious and picturesque "home" which has been provided for superannuated members of the printing craft, a unique open-air contest was staged among grizzled veterans of the office and road. The implements of their friendly warfare were not the keyboards of modern machines, but the sticks and rules with which the contestants were more familiar. One imagines it would be interesting to trace the itinerary of the many journeyman journeyers who have found a snug harbor in this home which they call their own. Few seafaring men could relate more wonderful tales of adventure than some of them. A compilation of these tales would prove that, while there are said to be "tricks in all trades," there were, indeed, both romance and interest in the experiences and adventures of the old-time itinerant printer. The composite story would form an epic in an important era of American

Editorial Notes

In voting recently, at its biennial council, to encourage "clean journalism," the General Federation of Women's Clubs placed itself unequivocally on record as fully aware of one of the great needs of the day. And in commenting favorably upon the federation's action, the Rural New Yorker as definitely aligned itself upon the side of those who are striving to bring the better things of life into common experience. The resolution adopted by the federation called upon the club members everywhere to purchase only these newspapers that come approximately up to their ideals of clean journalism and to refrain from buying periodicals that do not conform to those ideals. The Rural New Yorker wrote in part:

We would especially wish to carry the women's mes sage to the mothers and daughters of the farm home. The farm home is the nursery of high moral ideals, and any paper coming with the signs of fake and deception or filth should be promptly barred. A guest coming with a dirty face would needs make an apology, but the dirty journal with its fake advertising columns and filthy editorial pages comes with pretenses of virtue and merit. We indorse the club women's resolution

It is a strange attitude which at least one newspaper in Washington, D. C., has taken toward a fatality which resulted the other day in consequence of a bootlegger, who was driving an automobile at a great speed, running into another car. Instead of drawing attention to the act that the outlaw is responsible for the crime, this publication attempted in a special article, and also in an editorial, to put the blame entirely on the police! The reasoning is really fascinating. The paper virtually claims that the bootlegger was not accountable for the speed at which he was traveling because the police were in pursuit. Hence what else could the poor fellow do but try to get away? The police should not have pressed him so hard. And if in attempting to escape he was unfortunate enough to damage or destroy other people, or their property, well, he was not actually to blame! A truly delightful philosophydelightful, that is, for the lawbreakers.

Fascismo, Protestantism and Freedom in Italy

An erroneous report is in circulation to the effect that the Collegio Internazionale Monte Mario of Rome, Italy, has been closed and the property seized by the Fascist Government. The rumor is likely due to an Associated Press wire on the recent anniversary of the birth of Rome, announcing a gift by the Government to the city of Rome of the hill, Monte Mario. This gift had reference to a small portion of the hill, reserved for a monument to the great Italian poet, Dante.

The Collegio Internazionale Monte Mario, a commanding Methodist educational institution for boys and nen, continues to function under the able presidency of Dr. Samuel W. Irwin, a native of New England, for several years following the war occupied in Methodist mission work in the Balkans, and in 1924 placed in charge of this Monte Mario project.

This collegio is the outgrowth of a small school opened by the Methodist Church on the old Quirinal Hill some years after the taking of Rome by the troops of Victor Emanuel II and the establishment of the government of modern Italy in the Eternal City.

From the first it was a pronounced success. Protestant, Masonic and other liberal-minded families sent their boys to its halls. The grandsons of Garibaldi secured most of their scholastic preparation here. Apart from the pronounced Vatican hostility, its main handicap in its very limited room space and equipment. Lack of funds prevented for many years its removal to more v . b . With the coming of the Centenary movement, the Italian Methodist Conference asked the church authorities to provide generously for the material extension of this school. The result was the purchase in the early summer of 1:14 of a superb tract of ground on the southern spur of Monte Mario. This original purchase was added to in 1918 by the purchase of the adjoining property, known as Bellosguardo.

Two old buildings were remodeled and greatly enlarged, and the school opened in its new home in the fall of 1920. It was an occasion for signal rejoicings throughout Latin Protestantism, and not a few congratulations and good wishes were received by the collegio leaders from non-Protestant but liberal Italians up and down the Peninsula.

There is probably no country in the world where the traditional sense of freedom is stronger than in Italy. The average Italian is a stickler for liberty. And this is true notwithstanding some current signs to the contrary. Furthermore, Italy has felt since 1870 that she is called to an important service of enlightenment and good will among nations of Europe, particularly the nations of southeastern Europe. This was Mazzini's teaching.

This Methodist educational institution was inspired by the highest idealism of the Peninsula. thoroughly Italian. Its teaching staff is Italian: During the war its teachers and students won conspicuous recognition for service to the country and the allied cause. Since the armistice it has sought to aid Italy in extending her influence for good by enrolling in the student body young men from many nations. Boys from Montenegro, Albania, Serbia, Germany and other races have been registered. It is an important contribution to present and future international accord, particularly around the Adriatic and the Mediterranean, and all in teeping with a half century of Italian political thought.

The Protestant churches in Italy are the Wesleyan, Methodist and Baptist of England, the Waldensian, and the Southern Baptist and Methodist Episcopal of the United States. There are a few small groups of United Brethren. Scattered here and there are Protestant Episcopal, Church of England, German Lutheran, Scotch Pressylerian, and French Protestant congregations. These latter engage in no so-called missionary enter-

The Waldensian is the largest numerically, its main strength being in the Piedmont valleys. It has, however, important schools and churches in Florence, Rome, Naples, and in other cities and towns of central and southern Italy. It receives substantial support from the Presbyterians of Scotland and North America. Before the war it was aided materially by German Protestants. It finds considerable financial assistance in Switzerland and less in France.

The outstanding work of the American Baptists is their weekly and monthly publications. The Methodists have promoted equally both evangelistic and educational

The present serious restrictions on Protestantism in Italy date from the capture of Rome by the Fascisti in the fall of 1922. Mussolin's tussle with Don Sturzo, the leader of the Roman Catholic Partito Popolare, was not against Roman Catholicism but against one of the too my political groups in the country.

He declared that there was no reasonable ground for the continued existence of this party inasmuch as Fas-cismo was ardently Roman Catholic and would care well for the interests of the Roman Catholic Church. Though the Popular Party was not destroyed, its militant head, Don Sturzo, was driven into retirement and Mussolini has made good his promise.

Fascismo holds that the Roman Catholic Church is an Italian creation and as such should be zealously supported by every patriotic Italian. Furthermore, through its superb organization and discipline Fascismo can aid in solidifying the national sentiment of the country and outside of the country it may be the largest help to the satisfactory solution of some or all of Italy's perplexing foreign problems.

Protestantism is also regarded by Fascismo as an institution of Western democracy, and Western democracy is anathema to the predominant wing of Fascismo.

Masonry is regarded much in the same light.

The Protestant Collegio Internazionale Monte Mario been the special object of attack because of its sightly position, its ambitious program, and a misapprehension of its purpose and aims. There is no institution in Italy more truly devoted to the highest success of Italians at home and abroad than this Monte Mario Collegio. Its very largest success would undoubtedly strengthen the position of Italians in America and win for the Peninsula many additional thousands of sincere English and American friends.

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in London

London, June 26 Oxford University's annual "commemoration" of its Pious Founders" this week has been unusually distinguished. Stanley Baldwin, Winston Churchill and Admiral Jellicoe received honorary degrees, to the cus-tomary accompaniment of tutorial Latin and pupillary hilariousness-Mr. Churchill's new doctorial black velvet cap and scarlet gown coming in for especial notice. The four hundredth anniversary of the foundation of Christ Church College was also celebrated. The King and Queen attended the religious service in the cathedral attached to this famous educational institution, where the Archbishop of Canterbury and variously berobed bishops, deans, presidents, masters, principals, provosts, wardens, censors, professors, graduates, and undergraduates join in a quaint medieval thanksgiving for "Thomas Wolsey, Cardinal Archbishop of York, and King Henry VIII, by whose munificence we are here brought up to godliness and studies of good learning."

What is described as the greatest road-building enterprise in England since the days of the Romans has just een completed, a new section of the Great West Road, commonly known as the Bath Road, having been opened recently by the King and the Queen. It is by far the most massively constructed highway in the kingdom, having a foundation of twelve inches of consolidated hard core, on which is imposed nine inches of Portland cement concrete with a wearing surface on top of it of two inches of rock asphalt. The road is 120 feet wide for most of its length. and a verge of twenty-five feet has been left for future widening. Footpaths run along the side, but not directly in contact with the road. Great forest trees planted sixty feet apart will eventually line its edges, five varieties having been planted in mile lengths that there may be long rows of planes, chestnuts, beeches, Norwegian maples and lime trees. According to the provision of the act under which the road was built, it cannot be broken up by gas, water, or electricity companies, or even by the post office.

A reading of the newspaper accounts dealing with holiday statistics will convince any doubter that there is a special field of mathematics having to do exclusively with, and applying only to, this subject. It appears that after every holiday the reports announce the traffic as having exceeded all previous records. Evidently the official statistics of the annual increase in the population are far under the true state of affairs, because at Christ mas and again at Easter the same accounts were published. It seems that the railways "carried twice as many visitors to the seaside as last Whitsuntide in spite of the fact that road traffic was immeasurably greater There are also the usual accounts of "unparalleled scenes" on the beaches, where thousands, unable to secure hotel accommodation, are as usual forced to spend the night. But to add to the full glory of the subject, we are told that twice as many people will go away for the August bank holiday as went away for Whitsuntide. Nevertheless, it is stated on reliable authority that many were seen on the streets in town this Whitsuntide and have no intention of being away in August.

4 4 Opinions differ as to which platitudes and bromides the most hackneyed, but this collection, assembled in London, ought to go far as a prize winner: Sir James Barrie is whimsical.

Max Beerbohm is incomparable Winston Churchill is erratically brilliant. June is the month of roses. Kent is an orchard. Bernard Shaw is a daring iconoclast. Sussex villages are "old world." The sky in Italy is of a dazzling blue. The mountains are snow-capped heights. Wordsworth is a nature lover. Epstein is a pioneer.

The animated discussion of the past few days as to whether the lions at Wembley are British lions or lions of Judah has brought forth a flood of learned comment and research into a subject seemingly devoid of great historical interest. However, an eminent authority now comes into the field with the assertion that the English lion is not English at all, but French. It is held to have come from Aquitaine, that land beloved by James Branch Cabell, where the kings of England once held large properties as dukes of Aquitaine. It is further held aldic experts that there is no definitely English beast for heraldic purposes. There was the great Dragon of King Arthur, but his slaying by St. George has rather ruined him for public purposes. If the English lion is really French, there is rather a touch of humor in the fact that Landseer's polite-looking lions were erected at the base of the column dedicated to the memory of Nelson, the "scourge of the French."

It is said that the Government of the Irish Free State intends to start radiocasting lessons in Gaelic. The alleged reason for this move is rather amusing. It appears that one of the Free State governmental departments addressed a letter to a German manufacturing firm beginning "A chara," the rest of the letter being written in English. A reply was received beginning "Dear Sirs," the rest of the letter being written in Gaelic. There being no one in the department who could read the language, it was necessary to send it to Trinity Col-lege in Dublin to be translated.

"It is better to have a loving wife than to make fifty at cricket. It's better to have a loving wife than to make ninety-nine at cricket. I won't go beyond that." Thus cautiously spoke Sir James Barrie—who was a cricketer became a famous author-to a Cotswold village cricket team of married men beaten at this game by a combination of bachelors. Several of his hearers had failed to score at all—their record being thus 0, or, in British cricketing parlance, "a duck's egg." Sir James Barrie was thus afforded an opportunity of which, in opening the village clubhouse immediately afterward, he availed himself shamelessly. "I hear funny sounds inside this pavilion," he said. "No one really knows what's inside, but I think I hear ducks laying eggs."

The Benchers of Lincoln's Inn have decided to maintain their ancient banqueting hall and are undertaking its complete restoration. Though not so handsome as the Middle Temple Hall, it is still nearly 500 years old. dating as it does from the year 1489. There is oak screen and a picture by Hogarth of St. Paul before Felix. Here were held the "Revels," at one of according to the diarists, Evelyn and Pepys, King Charles II was present, and his signature in the Adn Book is still to be seen. About 100 years ago the hall was lengthened by ten or twelve feet and the open oak roof was replaced for the present less beautiful ceiling. At the moment the old hall is filled with scaffolding.

London shipowners have been greatly interested in the announcement that two motor ships designed for the London-Leningrad service are now under construction in Russia. They are comparatively small vessels of 2750 tons, but are of the refrigerator type and will each have accommodation for fifty-five passengers. The announce-ment has recalled the fact that in pre-war days Russia had made further advances in adapting the Diesel engine to large-sized ships than any other country, the principal advance having been made in vessels constructed for use on the Volga. In view of the general agreement among shipbuilders in England that Diesel-engine vessels are not as suitable for trading in European waters as the coal-burning craft, it is assumed that the Soviet Government will arrange for fuel oil for the ships at a price below the regular market quotation. The new development is interesting as possibly meaning a bid by Russian exporters for a share in the British market for meat and dairy products.

Regarding the Vice-Presidential Office To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

From time to time in the United States, and especially every four years, the important question comes to the front as to who will be acceptable as a vicepresidential candidate. Men of the highest political presige and of statesmanship caliber hesitate ing such a nomination, as frequently it is but a step to being shelved permanently.

The country at large, however, is deserving of more consideration than that this mighty office be made the football, on the one hand, of designing politicians, and shunned, on the other, by many of those best qualified, by reason of its absence of active constructive opportunity to render the public a genuine service.

No plan that I have ever seen advanced appeals to me as presenting so satisfactory a solution as possibly the following: Why not make the Vice-President's posi-tion carry with it the duties of a Senator of the United States, unattached from any state representation but with a voice and vote equal to that of any other Senator?

Does it not seem probable that, under such an arrangement, the best men of the Nation would be pleased occupy such a station, carrying with it, as it would, the possibility of presidential ascendance, not so much eason of removal through disability or demise by reason of removal through disability of demise of the Chief Executive as by the prominence acquired through some worthy service rendered the Nation

It is not enough to say that the Vice-President and the President might be at variance on public issues, for the very reason that the uncertainty now prevailing would pass were the Vice-President in a po express by voice and vote his position on issues of national import.

Twice in the Nation's history has the presidential successor been followed by the most serious misgivings. Other times a mere perusal of the list of those having occupied the office proves that, with few exceptions, the men who were in line to be called into active labor to the duties of this high office were of mediocre ability Portland, Ore.
